+ BIOGRAPHY

Dr Malki F.Z. holds Master and Doctorate degrees in English as a Foreign Language specialised in applied linguistics and applied language studies from University Constantine 1, Algeria. She has been teaching EFL for twelve years. Since 2018, she has been an English for Science and Technology assistant professor in the Preparatory Class Department at the National Polytechnic College of Constantine (ENPC), Algeria. During that, she has been teaching English to a variety of students: freshmen, sophomores, seniors, and doctorate students of different specialties: science & technology (common branch) and material, mechanical, and process engineering. She is also a main member of the Preparatory Class Department Scientific Committee for three years and an additional member of the ENPC Parity Committee since 2021. To reinforce her teaching skills and open her learning horizons, Dr Malki enrolled and took two accomplishment / achievement certificates given by native speakers of English, VELF ENS Professional Development Workshop Series “Brown Bag Workshop Series” with VELF Erin Watters 2019-2021 and an online course on How to Plan a Great Lesson by Future Learn: Orlando Edwards (Country Director) in May/June 2021. This course helped develop English language teaching skills and looked at how to plan and deliver effective English lessons. Dr. Malki’s slogan in academic life can be summarised in the following expressive quote by Benjamin Franklin, “If you would not be forgotten as soon as you are dead and rotten, either write something worth reading, or do something worth the writing.”
